Mary Lauderdale is one of the Advocate & ESE Specialists at Ann Storck Center. Mary graduated from the University of Central Florida in 2009 with a B.S. in Expectational Student Education and started teaching children with autism right away. She fell in love with teaching children with disabilities and wanted to continue her education. That is when she decided to go back to school (UCF) and get her Master's degree in Expectational Student Education. While getting her masters, she become the Behavioral Specialist at the school she was teaching at. In this position she provided teachers with strategies and resources they can use within the classroom. Mary is all about collaborating with others.

In 2017, Mary made the big move to South Florida and got certified to become an Infant/Toddler Development Specialist. She worked with families who had infants and toddlers that were showing signs of developmental delays and was able to provide them strategies to develop the skills needed. That is when she realized she loves working with families and being their support system. Mary joined Ann Storck Center January 2022 and she has enjoyed working with our advocacy parents as well as supporting our DOE children and families.
